

WU TING FANG'S SON IN HONOLULU

American newspaper reporters have been waiting for Wu Chaochu, son of the famous Chinese Minister at Washington, Wu Ting Fang, who recently returned to China and is one of the vice-presidents of the Foreign Board, the Chinese State Department. Wu Chaochu is a passenger on the Coptic on his way to rejoin his parents after finishing his course in the Atlantic City (N. J.) High school where he graduated with the highest honors. He spent two years at this school and five years previous in the Washington schools. When seen last night he displayed a lively interest in Hawaii and instead of being interviewed he interviewed the reporter himself.

"I think this is a beautiful city," he said. "It really looks like a big park." Chinese affairs he did not seem inclined to discuss, excusing himself on the plea that he was not a statesman yet. Asked whether he intended to be one some day he replied, "That I cannot tell. I don't know whether I shall do any more school work or not. That will be decided when I return home." American politics seemed to interest Mr. Wu most and one of his first questions was as to the political faith of the territory. When told that they were safe in the Republican fold he remarked, with evident pleasure, "Solid for Roosevelt, eh?"

When asked as to his opinion of the war he replied, "Naturally the Chinese are favoring the Japanese. I shall enjoy viewing the war from nearby but I don't want to get too close to it. I hear that lots of you newspaper men are coming back because you couldn't get to the front. I guess we know more about the war than the correspondents do." Then he turned to the reporter and asked, "You are a student from America yourself, aren't you?" The reporter confessed that he was. "Couldn't you find a job in the States?" he asked. Then the conversation drifted to Chinese exclusion and Wu said he thought that China should exclude Americans in retaliation. As he said good bye Wu said with a sly twinkle in his eye, "Have you got two columns out of me? Send around a paper in the morning, I want to see what you did get."

Eyes Examined

There is no calling where accuracy and skill are more in demand than that of the optician. One familiar with the construction of the eye knows that there are many eye-defects which can not be accurately estimated or corrected by the use of test letters and cards alone.

For this reason we use, in our eye examinations, the several different methods that long experience has taught us bring best results.
